

Co-payments

What are co-payments?

Co-payments are the amount of the costs that the insured person has to pay for medical services. When insured persons have reached the age of 18, they have to pay the co-payment. There is an exception for travel costs – co-payments must also be made by children and young people who have not yet reached the age of 18.

The amount of an additional payment is generally 10% of the costs, with a minimum of 5 € and a maximum of 10 €. More details about the amount of the co-payment can be found in the list under the question “Which services are subject to co-payment?”.

Some of these benefits can be reimbursed by the BKK PwC, please contact us.

Which co-payments frequently occur?

Prescription drugs (pink prescription)

The doctor prescribes medicines required for treatment. Some medicines are exempt from this co-payment requirement. The insured person receives the medicines by presenting the doctor’s prescription to the pharmacy. A co-payment is to be made there. Only in exceptional cases may the doctor prescribe non-prescription medicines that are not covered by the social health insurance (e.g. some medicines for flu or headaches). These costs are not reimbursable.

There is an easy way to check which kind of prescription is covered by the social health insurance and which isn’t:

- Pink prescription: covered except co-payment
- Blue, green and white prescription: not covered

Med. travelling costs

In medically justified cases (e. g. emergency car) we cover the travel costs and for these you have to pay an additional payment.

Remedies and aids

Co-payments of different amounts must be paid for doctor-prescribed remedies and aids such as physiotherapy, inserts, crutches, etc. The doctor also issues a prescription for this.

The insured person who receives these services from the respective provider (e. g. orthopedic shoemaker) where the co-payment is also paid.

- Pink prescription: covered except co-payment
- Blue, green and white prescription: not covered

Hospitalization

For hospital treatment the insured person makes a co-payment of 10 € for each day, but for maximum of 28 days per calendar year. The co-payment is invoiced directly by the hospital. No co-payment is required if women are in hospital for childbirth.

Can I get the co-payment back from the BKK PwC?

A refund of the co-payments is not possible, but you only have to make co-payments up to a certain amount per calendar-year. Your exact personal limit will be calculated by BKK PwC.
